Dear Mayor Corrigan and Council:

The Provincial Office for the Early Years (EYO) participated at the 2015 Union of BC Municipalities convention by hosting a table during the "Tools, Resources and Funding" session. The EYO table focused on sharing resources developed over the past year designed to support local governments to increase their capacity to undertake local planning, projects and development related to child care.

The Provincial Government of British Columbia strives to increase quality, affordability, and accessibility of child care through a variety of initiatives.

Over the past year, the EYO has worked with local governments to explore local government "policy tools" that can help ensure availability of quality child care spaces across British Columbia. This has culminated in a number of resources that can assist local governments in understanding their role and opportunities to exercise their unique levers to support local child care expansion.

One of the resources shared at the convention was the brochure "Municipalities: Top 13 Actions to Support Local Child Care Needs". This document was developed in collaboration with local government representatives and the local government division of the Ministry of Community, Sport, and Cultural Development. It provides a concise description of 13 actions that local governments can take to support child care in their community including streamlining. I have enclosed the pamphlet for your perusal. It can also be accessed on-line at: <http://goo.gl/93l2iY> along with a number of other resources for local government.

Should you be interested in further information regarding the resources available to municipalities to support the expansion of child care programs in your community, please contact the EYO at 250 387-5942 or send your e-mail to: EarlyYearsOffice@gov.bc.ca.

Sincerely,

Stephanie Cadieux
Minister

has resources and opportunities that may be of interest to local governments.

Host a BC Early Years Centre

Local governments are eligible to apply to host a BC Early Years Centre themselves or in partnership with other community organizations. For families with young children, BC Early Years Centres provide one-stop access to a range of programs, services, information and referrals (including child care) in their communities. Your parks and recreation department or local library staff may also be interested in participating. Learn more about the application process here: www.mcf.gov.bc.ca/early_years/

Child Care Actions for Municipalities

In collaboration with local governments, the Provincial Office for the Early Years has developed a resource that describes 13 actions that local governments can take to help ensure there is an adequate supply of child care in their community. Find the resource here: goo.gl/gzrPEF.

Local Government Requirements: A Handbook for Child Care Providers

This guide is intended to help those interested in establishing a child care facility become familiar with the local government bylaws and processes that may affect their plans. Find the Handbook at: goo.gl/eiQJ9Z). A one-page summary of the Handbook is also available at: goo.gl/mk6KtI. Please consider distributing this guide—or the link to this guide—at your local government office.

Municipalities: Top 13 Actions to Support Local Child Care Needs

Provincial and local government, along with school districts, businesses, child care providers, faith organizations and parents all play an important role in meeting local demands for child care. This document focuses on what municipalities can do to help support the creation of child care in their communities. The Provincial Office for the Early Years thanks those municipal staff who have helped us generate this list.

1. Assign a single staff member to help all child care providers navigate municipal requirements

The process of opening or expanding a child care facility can be very complex. Lend a hand by ensuring there's ready access to a knowledgeable staff member who has experience introducing child care providers to municipal requirements and processes.

2. Ensure bylaws reflect up-to-date legislation

Laws regulating child care have changed, but not every municipality's bylaws have changed along with them. This creates a conundrum for some child care providers, who find themselves facing a legislative catch-22. By reviewing your bylaws, you can help ensure they're not inadvertently causing problems for potential child care providers.

The Community Care and Assisted Living Act came into force in 2004, replacing the Community Care Facility Act. In the years following, the Child Care Licensing Regulation was replaced with a regulation of the same name that changed the number of children that could be cared for in different types of facilities (for more information, see goo.gl/EnfSfZ). If your bylaws refer to capacities and classifications from the old regulations, they may be inadvertently complicating the process for some providers.

Also note that s. 20 of the Community Care and Assisted Living Act creates a right to operate licensed home-based child care for eight or less children, despite any bylaw to the contrary (as long as it complies with fire and health requirements). Eliminating unenforceable bylaws that say otherwise is another way to reduce confusion for child care providers.

3. Review land use bylaws to ensure they support new child care spaces

If you have unmet demand for child care in your community, it may be time to reconsider where child care is allowed. You might decide that some land use decisions made when child care needs were lower need to be revisited in order for the local supply of quality child care to meet your current residents' needs.

4. Review municipal fees charged to child care providers who are developing or expanding their facilities

Child care providers typically enter the business of child care because they want to help children learn and grow, not because they are likely to earn a lot of money. Many providers must construct a facility with very limited financial resources, relying on friends and family to pitch in. The costs of rezoning and permit fees may represent a significant hurdle to these providers. Consider establishing lower rates for child care providers where possible to help ensure local child care demands are met.

5. Consider supporting non-profit child care facilities through in-kind contributions

By offering land or space in a municipal building to a local non-profit child care provider, you could help them create quality, affordable child care spaces.

6. Work with your regional health authority to establish document protocols and other ways of streamlining the process for child care providers

Licensed child care providers have to work with both their regional health authority and their municipality to successfully launch or expand their operation. Consider addressing potential bureaucratic roadblocks by ensuring your process doesn't conflict with your regional health authority's—or better yet, work to integrate them.

7. Spread the word—tell councillors and staff about why child care is important to your community

Support from elected officials and staff is important in moving forward with the actions on this list. If you think child care should be a municipal priority, let others know why!

Why should municipalities care about child care?

Responsibility for child care does not fall to municipalities. However, municipalities are responsible for land use planning, business licensing, and other decisions that can affect the local supply of child care.

Local economies rely on child care to allow resident parents to be employed, to start businesses that employ others, and to spend what they earn locally. Research indicates that for every job created in a child care facility, 2.15 additional jobs are created in that community (Child Care Coalition of Manitoba).

8. Encourage municipal staff to streamline processes for child care providers

Child care providers often have to deal with multiple departments within their municipal government. Consider arranging for building and fire inspectors to convene and walk through the processes and rules that child care providers currently face, looking for redundancies and conflicts. Also consider how the permitting and business licensing process can be streamlined.

9. Assemble a cross-sectoral child care planning team

By bringing together municipal staff, child care providers, the business community, parents, and/or other stakeholders, you could create a child care planning advisory body. Members could design a needs assessment, find ways to collaborate to increase child care, and/or draft a child care plan (see below).

10. Draft a child care plan

Many communities have drafted child care plans that map out future actions that the municipality will take in order to help ensure an adequate local supply of child care. These plans are often informed by parent surveys or needs assessments. A child care plan can be part of a broader social plan or can stand alone. Committing to regular progress reports can help motivate staff to follow through. For examples of child care plans, see below:

11. Offer your employees child care

If municipal staff are short on child care, consider partnering with a non-profit provider to establish a new facility for use by municipal staff. In addition to adding new child care spaces to your community, you could decrease employee stress and absenteeism.

12. Work with your school district

Consider signing a protocol with your school district agreeing to promote the joint use of space and/or take other actions that will help encourage the creation and maintenance of quality, affordable child care spaces.

13. Include a focus on the early years and/or child cares in your Official Community Plan

Young children are the future of your community, and child care is a foundational component of your local economy. Consider revising your OCP to ensure it reflects your commitment to children and their families and enables you to implement some of the ideas discussed above. For example, an OCP might include the following policy:

Policy 111—Support access to affordable quality licensed child care (including preschool) by:

- Ensuring zoning bylaws provide maximum potential for the provision of child care facilities
 - Developing policies and targets for provision of child care space in new large-scale development projects that reflect the needs of existing and new residents
 - Partnering to create child care spaces in unused spaces in City facilities
