IN MEMORIUM - COUNCILLOR NICK VOLKOW

His Worship, Mayor Mike Hurley, announced the recent passing of Nick Volkow. The text of the Mayor's statement follows:

"On behalf of Council and the City of Burnaby, I would like to begin by expressing my deepest condolences to the family of Councillor Nick Volkow. Our thoughts are with you, as you grieve the loss of your beloved father, grandfather and friend.

The City of Burnaby has lost an exceptional man. Nick was truly committed to public service and spent his life working to build a better community for residents of all ages and walks of life. His advocacy has left an indelible mark on this City — many of the facilities, green spaces and events we know and love are a direct result of Nick's efforts.

Nick said that politics was part of the fabric of his life growing up in East Vancouver. Shortly after graduating high school, he began working on campaigns for the provincial NDP. In 1983, Nick and his wife Shirley moved to Burnaby, where they raised their three children. Nick immediately took an active role in helping to shape the City. Within a few short years, he joined the Advisory Planning Commission and the Parks and Recreation Commission.

Nick understood the value of good programs that offered youth the opportunity to gather and play safely, and was also inspired by his own young family and became a driving force behind the creation of Burnaby's first skateboard parks and youth centres. He ran for a seat on the Burnaby School Board in 1987. Although unsuccessful, Nick revealed something about his character in the years that followed. He never let a setback stop him. Nick sought a seat on Burnaby Council twice, before landing a spot in 1996 as a member of the Burnaby Citizens Association.

For 24 years, and through eight consecutive terms, Nick's hard work and dedication to the community won him the respect of Burnaby residents and the admiration of his peers on council.

Nick also worked as a truck driver for Safeway Canada. His experience on the road shaped his desire to build better infrastructure for pedestrians, cyclists and drivers. He was an early advocate for Burnaby trails, including the creation of the Central Valley Greenway. As Burnaby's urban centres grew, Nick took pride in protecting the City's green spaces. He pushed to restore Burnaby Lake, and his efforts led to the dredging project that improved the lake's water quality and wildlife habitat. As a result, the lake continues to be a beloved place for people to enjoy peace and quiet, whether on the trails or in a canoe.

Growing up in East Vancouver, one of Nick's favourite hobbies was watching blues concerts. Sharing his love of good music became a thread throughout his career. When Nick joined Council, he was invited on an official visit to the Hot Air Balloon Festival in Gatineau, Quebec. Instead of raving about the balloons, he came home inspired by the sounds that accompanied them. He helped convince his colleagues on Burnaby Council that the City needed a blues festival. You could find rock and roll anywhere, he said, but for Blues, you would have to visit Burnaby. And with that, the Burnaby Blues and Roots Festival was born. The festival has become one of the City's signature events and a major tourist draw. For more than two decades, Nick was one of the festival's biggest supporters and promoters.

Throughout his years working on Council, and his more than two dozen terms on City Commissions and Committees, Nick never lost sight of what made him run for public office in the first place. He fought to make Burnaby accessible for families of all incomes and ages. He used his voice to call for changes that would make housing affordable for people of all backgrounds.

I know Nick was very well liked around City Hall. He took the time to get to know staff on a personal level, treating them like extended family. Around the hall, he was known as a great storyteller, and would often talk about weekend excursions to flea markets and vintage record stores in search of great jazz or blues albums. He was an advocate for the underdog, and wanted to understand how city policies could affect people for the better, or for the worse.

Nick had a great sense of humour and a no-nonsense approach. He was also a man of honesty and integrity who led from the heart.

On behalf of all Burnaby residents, City staff and Council members, we will miss Nick dearly and we are so grateful for his unwavering commitment and service to our community."

8. INQUIRIES

Councillor Jordan - Deer Lake Child Care Centre

Councillor Jordan inquired regarding the Child Care Centre for City Employees report (adopted by Council on 2020 May 25) and if the plan for the child care centre was contingent on the receipt of the City receiving a Provincial grant.

Staff advised that the 2020 May 25 report approved by Council authorized the full funding amount for the child care centre project. Should Provincial funding be provided, the cost of the project to the City would decrease by the grant funding amount. Staff will prepare a subsequent report to Council after the environmental assessment is completed, and funding opportunities will be included in the report.

In addition, the speaker requested that the Community Heritage Commission receive the subsequent report prior to Council's approval. The speaker further requested that a 1999 report regarding Deer Lake Park Management Plan be circulated to Council members (the Plan is available on the City's website). The City Manager advised that the subsequent Child Care Centre for City Employees report would be directed to the Financial Planning Committee and that a copy of the report will be provided to the Community Heritage Commission after consideration by Council.
